My friends, as we continue to reflect upon "Rebuild my Church", the words Christ spoke to St. Francis 802 years ago, what needs to become prominent in our minds is the statement of 'why we do what we do'. I just heard this phrase not too long ago and it stuck with me, especially as a Priest. When I was in Seminary, my Spiritual Director, during our first initial meeting asked me, "So, Matt, why do you want to be a Priest." And my response was that I like to serve and desire to serve the way Christ served others. He acknowledges the answer, but then asked again, almost as if I didn't get the full picture. It wasn't until the third time he asked the question where I simply gave up trying to answer and said, "I don't know." He then replied, "Because you love Jesus."

Love, my friends, is so unique, but yet so misleading. The secular understanding is only for individuals to come together to live secular lives and just have 'fun' together, whatever that means for individuals. However, God and His Church have a different understanding. Yes, as we keep mentioning, it's about giving ourselves entirely to the other. That's true, but the response goes much deeper than that. Love, inherently, is indescribable. The Bible gives us numerous ways to interpret love, and most respectively, the Love of God and the love God has for us. As a Priest, my love for Christ is distinct from your love for Him- and that's ok. What we need to understand though is that the secular understanding of love pulls us from actually experiencing the depth of what love is in our own unique way.

The Church has 4 main categories of Love: Agape- Charity and Divine Love; Eros- Romantic or Passionate Love; Philia- Brotherly Love; Storge- Familial and Affectionate Love. Society has taken both Eros and Storge, and also Philia to a certain extent, to a negative extreme, as it only leads to satisfying the vicious passions in our life. All four of these are intrinsically good; it's only the world that distorts its understanding.

When Jesus is challenged again by the Pharisees in the Gospel about the greatest commandment, He knows their intention, but answers the question according not to the law of man, which is what they were anticipating, rather the law of God. Jesus answered correctly in saying that the greatest commandment is to love God and love neighbor- agape; but he said it in such a way that it wasn't secular, the way the Pharisees view it as- eros.

Love is, my friends, what drives us to 'rebuild'. The greatest act of love is obviously Christ dying on the Cross; and even on the Cross Christ exercises each of the four categories. If we are to 'rebuild His house' we need to learn to love the way God wants us to, and be compelled to act on that love. Is love challenging? Yes. Do we know where Love is going to lead us? No. But if we do it because we do all things with great love, as St. Teresa of Calcutta said, it may be difficult, but we rebuild in the right way. So may 'love' be our answer as to 'why we do what we do', because it will lead us, God willing to Christ and the love he aspires us to experience and what is needed to rebuild His house.

-Fr. Matt

NEWS FROM THE ARCHDIOCESE OF HARTFORD OCTOBER 24 - 30, 2026

During Men's Conference, Catholic Men Called to 'Rebuild My Church'

- Story by Joe Pisani

Eight hundred years ago, Jesus spoke to a young Francis of Assisi from the cross in the rundown Chapel of San Damiano and said, "Francis, go repair my house, which as you can see is falling completely to ruin."

Six hundred men from throughout the state, from high school students to senior citizens in their 80s, were recently encouraged to ask, "Lord, what are you calling me to rebuild?"

The theme of the 19th annual Connecticut Catholic Men's Conference, held at Holy Cross High School in Waterbury, was "Rebuild My Church," recalling the mission of the young saint.

In his homily at the Vigil Mass, Auxiliary Bishop Juan Miguel Betancourt of the Archdiocese of Hartford told the men to respond to God's invitation with charitable acts in family and parish life and not to procrastinate in responding, until "life settles down."

"In this Franciscan year, these words 'Rebuild my Church' should stir something seriously generous within us, so we hope to respond," Bishop Betancourt said. "We want our families to flourish, our parishes to be alive, and our communities to know the goodness of God. And today, we place that renewed desire before Jesus and ask him to give us direction: 'Show me where you are calling me to love more faithfully. Once more, Lord, show me the good I can begin to do when I leave this place.'"

Father Declan Gibson, director of the Most Holy Eucharist Foundation, said the first step in accepting Christ's invitation to rebuild the Church is "to allow Christ to rebuild us" and then to bring that deeper faith into the home and make Jesus visibly present in family life because the domestic church will strengthen the Catholic Church.

This transformation, Father Gibson said, does not come from personal strength but rather through surrendering to Jesus by putting aside the distractions of the world and developing "a deep personal relationship with him in the Holy Eucharist" through weekly attendance at Adoration.

"Have an appointment with Jesus Christ, a private audience," Father Gibson said. "Brothers, go to Adoration. Sit before your Lord. There is no greater choice. Do not worry about doing everything perfectly or having the right words. Just go, and if you don't know what to say, don't speak. Just be with the Lord. Look at him as he looks at you. Let him capture your heart."

Father Glenn Sudano, a founding member of the Franciscan Friars of the Renewal, called the men to a deeper holiness sustained by God's grace and said that like the saints, they should strive for "greatness" in their faith, rather than settling on merely being "good." They are a part of "the most wonderful religion in the world," and while it is not perfect, it is the Mystical Body of Christ.

He encouraged them to strive for self-knowledge and practice daily prayer, regular confession and frequent attendance at Mass. They should also avoid distractions, such as politics, and focus on the Gospel.

Other speakers included Karlo Broussard of Catholic Answers and Jeanne Mancini, former president of the March for Life, whose talk, "Rebuilding a Culture of Life and Love," stressed the importance of "good, holy, masculine men" in shaping a culture that respects human dignity.

The conference offered opportunities for confession, veneration of 30 first-class relics and a Eucharistic procession with Bishop Richard Reidy of the Diocese of Norwich.

Conference director Ken Santopietro said, "Our goal is to help men increase their faith and to build themselves up from the inside ... and sometimes that happens through a speaker, a priest or fraternity with other men."
