Mass of Remembrance

for pregnancy and infant loss

Sunday, October 25th
11:00am Mass

October is Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness Month. We pray for all babies gone too soon, that they may always be remembered, and for those who grieve for them, that they may feel the healing presence of God. We will be holding a Mass of Remembrance on Sunday, October 25th at the 11:00 Mass. If you would like to help honor a baby during this month, there will be a binder in the Gathering Space where you can write the name of a child. For babies not named, you may include any other information, as you see fit (such as date of loss, etc.).

The Holy Eucharist
DID YOU KNOW?

This week on Monday, October 19th, we Americans celebrate a special day in the Church's calendar: the Feast Day of the North American Martyrs (St. John de Brebeuf, St. Isaac Jogues and their missionary companions). These brave Jesuits and laymen preached in New York State and were brutally martyred by the Hurons and Iroquois.

We have St. John's diary in which he wrote in the 1640's, "It grieves me greatly that this savage land has not yet been converted to Christ."

Do you believe that "this savage land" still "has not been converted to Christ"? Listen to the daily news and it will clearly answer that question.

Reflection: The call to conversion is as desperately needed now as it was then. We Catholics are called to personal holiness....to become saints. The surest, easiest and fastest way to accomplish holiness is through the Holy Eucharist. St. Carlo Acutis, our newest teenage saint, said, "The Eucharist is my highway to Heaven."

NEWS FROM THE ARCHDIOCESE OF HARTFORD OCTOBER 17 - 23, 2026

Liberty Bank Seeds New Scholarship Fund for Catholic Academy of Hartford

- Story by Shelley Wolf

With smiles all around, David W. Glidden, president and CEO of Liberty Bank and president of the Liberty Bank Foundation, delivered a grant check on Sept. 21 for $100,000 to Archbishop Christopher J. Coyne to seed the Catholic Academy of Hartford's new scholarship fund. The fund will be managed by the Connecticut Catholic Foundation.

Standing outside the school on Asylum Avenue in Hartford, Glidden handed over a jumbo-size replica of the check as staff from the Archdiocese of Hartford, officials from its Office of Catholic Schools and others looked on.

"Liberty Bank and community partners like the Connecticut Catholic Foundation are perfectly aligned when it comes to our shared commitment to improving the lives of individuals and families in our communities," Glidden said in a prepared statement.

With branches in Connecticut and Massachusetts, Liberty Bank is a large community bank with corporate headquarters located in Middletown. The bank also operates the Liberty Bank Foundation, noted for its philanthropic giving in the communities in which it serves.

"Team Liberty is proud to build on our longstanding commitment to Catholic Charities – this time by ensuring younger students have access to affordable and supportive educational opportunities right here in Hartford, and at an early age," Glidden said.

Glidden praised Archbishop Coyne for having the vision to create a new educational destination in the capital city that will not only serve children but also revitalize the surrounding neighborhood. He predicted, "It will have a profound impact in this community for generations to come."

Expressing gratitude for the large donation, Archbishop Coyne said, "This means a lot. It's the first major donation from a bank right here in Hartford. We're very, very grateful. This generous contribution will help to ensure that all families in Hartford have access to quality education, regardless of their ability to pay."

"For Hartford, we're offering an alternative education. Catholic school outcomes are very good, and we want to bring that to Hartford, especially to the North End," said Archbishop Coyne, stressing the merits of Catholic schools.

"This is an extremely generous grant from Liberty Bank. They're the anchor," said Paul McMahon, executive director of the Connecticut Catholic Foundation, a nonprofit philanthropy arm of the Archdiocese of Hartford. Connecticut Catholic Foundation created its program, the Hartford Neighborhood Families Scholarship Program, expressly for the Catholic Academy of Hartford.

Describing the new program as an "endowment fund," McMahon noted it will be used to educate the children of Hartford in the hopes that a Catholic education will help them to achieve their potential. "I think a good, sound Catholic education is going to make a very big difference in the lives of many," McMahon added.

In September 2025, the Archdiocese of Hartford purchased a former three-story office building at 765 Asylum Ave. for use as a school. In October 2025, Archbishop Coyne announced the creation of a new Catholic school, in keeping with his promise to bring Catholic education back to the city of Hartford after a more than 10-year absence.

The school property is located diagonally behind the Cathedral of St. Joseph. Plans are to renovate the former office building before opening it as a school, possibly in the fall of 2028.

The Catholic Academy of Hartford will initially welcome Hartford students in pre-kindergarten through the second grade. The plan is to add one grade each year, expanding up to the eighth grade.

The archdiocese is aiming to serve Hartford residents first, regardless of their faith tradition or creed, and to make a Catholic school education more affordable through a "tuition-accessible, sliding scale" tuition model that adjusts for families of all income levels.

"I'd like to encourage other organizations to donate to the school," Archbishop Coyne added. "It's all going to the kids."
