YOUR WEBSITE SHOULD HAVE MASS AND CONFESSION TIMES IMMEDIATELY VISIBLE.
NO CLICKING
NO SCROLLING.

Up-to-date and accurate Mass and confession times on parish websites should be required by canon law. (I'm only half joking.)

Parish website designers take note. The home page needs Mass Times, address & phone number... Put the rest after that.

Someone on CT already said this but it needs to be said again: petition to have every Parish website to have Mass times and Confession times in BIG BOLD LETTERS on the main page because lets be honest, thats all Im going to the website to look at

Made the mistake of trusting the Mass times listed on a parish website like some kind of rookie.

Why does every Catholic parish website bury their Mass times through several webpages?? Is there a reason or is it just poor web design

Going on a road trip soon to a different diocese. In this day in age how difficult is it for a diocese to have an up to date page on Mass times in the area? One parish website looks like it was designed in 1998, most recent bulletin is beginning of May.

I wonder if canonists and decretists ever said anything about requiring churches to clearly display Mass and confession times. If so we should dig it up and integrate it into the present Code so that Mass times are no longer hidden behind twelve tabs on a parish website

I can't believe this still bears repeating: mass times should be easily found on the home page of every parish website. It's all most visitors are ever searching for.

the only thing I care about when I visit the parish website is Mass times and confession times, and possibly a link to the latest bulletin.

Ice breaker for pastors meeting:

I will give $10 to the first priest who can find Ash Wednesday mass times on your parish website.
